WHAT IS DISTANCE LEARNING ?

The defining feature of distance learning is that one does not need to attend the awarding university or the institution in person. Many professional institutions including The Global Open University, Nagaland are aware of the conflict that people face between the need to work full time and the need to acquire and keep up-to-date a professional degree and qualification. Distance learning suits people for many different reasons. These could be family and financial circumstances, attending full time jobs, undergoing other academic and professional courses, being in business, industry and other entrepreneurial activities. The academic support given to a distance learning student varies from programme to programme and from institution to institution. However, the focus is on self study. In its simplest form, students receive basic academic guidance through specially written study materials and assignments.

The academic support is not the only support required. Without the support of family, colleagues and friends, studying for a qualification as an external student would be a great deal harder. Distance learning demands hard work, dedication and sacrifice. If there is one quality that successful distance learning students have in common, it is self discipline.

Although studying through distance learning mode is usually cheaper than attending a full time course, students must make sure they choose a programme that offers value for money. Universities and institutions offering professional job oriented qualifications must meet stringent quality standards and should be the same as those set for internal students.

Students and all those interested in getting admitted to a distance learning degree like the two years MBA Degree, two years professional M.A./M.Sc. Degree, three years MCA, BCA, BBA and other Bachelor's Degrees besides the one year B.Lib.I.Sc. and M.Lib.I.Sc. Degrees should have the grit and determination for undergoing and successfully completing the entire programme for becoming leaders and activists in the areas of business administration, information technology, agriculture, biological sciences, social sciences, juridical sciences, mass communication, remote sensing, ecology and environment, disaster management, sustainable development, biotechnology, nanotechnology, healthcare, criminology, forensic science, total quality management, bioinformatics, intellectual property rights, habitat and population studies, global warming reduction, ecotourism, hospitality, women's studies, geriatric care, medicinal plants, insurance business, peace, disarmament, education, library science etc.

Securing a Bachelor's / Master's Degree qualification through distance learning being conducted under the aegis of The Global Open University, Nagaland while continuing with other work may speak volumes about the ability to learn new skills, to balance workloads and to strive for excellence.

The rewards are great for the professional development of the participants of the distance learning programmes like the vocational and job oriented degree programmes mentioned above. Those who will throw and dedicate themselves into these programmes and assignments with full of zeal and enthusiasm are bound to be successful in designing a Masterplan Paradigm for protecting our mother earth in general and contributing for nation building in particular. The idea is to prepare a competent cadre of young and old professionals in this country for solving problems relating to peacelessness, poverty, unemployment, pollution and population explosion.

The salient feature of this Information Bulletin is that Honours Degrees with a provision of DIPOS and TRIPOS have been introduced for the first time in India with a view to enable the students in acquiring special skills in different subjects.

This Information Bulletin published by The Global Open University Nagaland has been brought out for general information. The contents, nomenclature, rules and regulations, curriculum, fee structure and eligibility criteria may be changed and modified, should these be deemed necessary
