Overview

A one-of-a-kind hybrid education postgraduate diploma in Medical Law and Ethics, offered continuously since 1999. Alumni from this programme include the country's leading healthcare professionals and leaders, including doctors, hospital administrators, lawyers and researchers.

Programme Highlights:

- Introduces learners to the linkages between the fields of law and health in order to assist them in taking informed, legally sound decisions and developing more ethical healthcare policies.
- Contextualises the constitutional dimension to 'right to health', obligations of medical professionals and complex issues such as 'consent' and 'confidentiality'.
- Relevant for doctors, nurses, paramedics, hospital administrators and other health workers looking to broaden their horizons of practice and knowledge.
- This unique programme can also be of interest to mental health professionals, professionals from pharmaceutical industries, research and diagnostics labs and health and fitness-focussed companies.
- Highlights emerging issues in the field of medicine like COVID-19, clinical trials, surrogacy and euthanasia.
- The programme is spread across one year and gives learners the flexibility to design their own learning pathway.
